Whether you are attracted to the classic, urban, rural or industrial style, color is the basis for decor... the use of a tone over another allows us to re-size spaces, modify volumes, define an environment and even mitigate certain defects.

For example, to create the impression of height in a low-ceilinged room, use a light color that will "descend" on the walls. This effect may be enhanced by adding vertical stripes. On the other hand, to lessen the height, choose a light tone on the background wall and bolder colors for the other walls.

In the color wheel, warm colors are distinguished from cool colors and their powers are often summarized in decorating.

Warm colors generate warm and intimate environments because the room will seem much smaller. They evoke sunshine, clarity...

- Yellow is a luminous color. It is the opening, clarity, brilliance, nobility. It stimulates the psyche and therefore promotes concentration, organization... Ideal for work places...
- Orange, like yellow, stimulates the intellect. It has a certain effect on the mood, rejects dark thoughts and invites a smile.

- Pink and red tones are not often used for our walls. However, they allow for a wide variety of looks. Red is anything but a soothing color... some are convinced that it enervates, others say it favors concentration and creativity.
- Violet invites serenity, meditation, spirituality, tenderness and sensitivity. It is the trending color for 2014. Its multiple shades offer infinite possibilities for interiors.

Cool colors enlarge a space, giving the impression of an airy and open living room with a peaceful environment.

- Blue is wisdom, fantasy, calmness, relaxation, creativity. There are so many shades of blue that this gentle color is suited for any interior: Blue, aerial, buoyant, "cold" where an area calls us to infinity.
- Green signals rest, nature, balance. A color of multiple hues that convey numerous effects. It is the reigning color of tranquility.

Our perception of color is also very personal. A peaceful environment for one person may prove stressful to another. It is therefore difficult to generalize. In short... all colors are pretty, but they need to be adequately harmonized in order to fully exploit their beauty. Have fun, colors exist to brighten and beautify your every day. The important thing is to add some color to your life!
